Why I Chose this Field:

Growing up, I was always loved children. I enjoyed mothering my younger cousins and my mother's friends' children. Once I was old enough, I started babysitting. This continued throughout high school and college. Starting out in college, education was not my first choice, I chose Social Work. After the first semester, I realized I could not see a child in pain. I still wanted to help children grow into amazing people, so I chose the education field and absolutely loved it. I couldn't imagine ever doing anything else. From the first day I walked into a classroom, my heart was complete.

"Children are the promise of the future, the assurance of greater things to come."
